Re: Congressional Redistricting Compliance with Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act

Dear Chair Stefanski, Chair Hewitt, and Other Members of the House and Senate Governmental Affairs Committees:
The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., NAACP Louisiana State Conference, Power Coalition for Equity and Justice, American Civil Liberties Union of Louisiana, and the ACLU Voting Rights Project write to highlight your affirmative obligation to comply with Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act ("Section 2") during this reapportionment and redistricting cycle when preparing a new district map to elect Louisiana’s six members of the United States House of Representatives. In particular, we urge you to consider whether Section 2 requires this body to enact a map with two opportunity districts each comprised of a majority of Black voters ("majority-minority opportunity district"). Under the existing map, there is one majority-minority opportunity district.

It is fair, necessary, and logical that Black Louisianans—who comprise nearly one-third of Louisiana’s residents, according to 2020 Census data—have an opportunity to elect their preferred congressional representatives. Members of Congress make decisions and enact policies that impact every aspect of American life, including access to education, economic opportunity, housing, health care, and criminal justice. An additional majority-minority opportunity district, which Section 2 likely requires, would provide Black voters with representation to address the state’s pervasive and ongoing record of inequality of opportunity in various aspects of life.

I. Background

In the next few months, the state legislature will redraw district maps for Louisiana’s six congressional districts based on data from the 2020 census. Your committees play an important role in that process. It is critical that the state legislature uses this opportunity to remedy the long-standing dilution of Black voting strength in Louisiana’s congressional map. Nearly one-third of Louisiana residents are Black, but the state has had only four Black Congresspeople since Reconstruction. This is a direct consequence of the configuration of Louisiana’s congressional districts: Black voters are packed into District 2, the state’s only majority-minority opportunity district, and Black communities are cracked among the state’s five majority-white districts (Districts 1, 3, 4, 5, 6). Although District 2 has elected Black candidates in all but one congressional election since 1990, none of the majority-white districts have ever elected a Black Congressperson. Simply put, Black voters in Louisiana are afforded less opportunity to elect candidates of their choice than white voters.

1 Congressional maps are drawn by the state legislature and subject to gubernatorial veto. La. Const. Art. III, § 6.
2 U.S. Census Bureau QuickFacts, United States Census Bureau, https://www.census.gov/quickfacts/fact/table/LA/POP010220#POP010220 (last visited Sep. 10, 2021). According to 2020 Census data, the total number of Black Louisiana residents over the age of 18 (also known as the Black voting age population, or BVAP) has increased by 4.4 percent since 2010.
4 Voters in District 2 have elected a Black candidate in all but one congressional election since 1990. See Louisiana’s 2nd Congressional District, Ballotpedia, https://ballotpedia.org/Louisiana%27s_2nd_Congressional_District (last visited Aug. 31, 2021).
II. The State Legislature Has an Obligation to Comply with Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act in Redistricting.

The state legislature has an affirmative obligation to comply with the Voting Rights Act in the redistricting process. In particular, this Committee has an obligation under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act to ensure that, under the totality of circumstances, racial minority voters, such as Black Louisianans, have equal opportunity “to participate in the electoral process and to elect representatives of their choice.” A Section 2 violation may require states, under certain circumstances, to draw majority-minority opportunity districts to provide minority voters with an effective opportunity to elect their preferred candidates.

A chief purpose of Section 2 is to prohibit minority vote dilution at all levels of government. A district map may violate Section 2 when it dilutes the voting power of voters of color, including by “packing” Black voters into districts where they constitute an unnecessarily large majority and depriving them of the opportunity to elect candidates of choice in other districts. Section 2 prohibits minority vote dilution regardless of whether a plan was adopted with a discriminatory purpose. Indeed, Section 2 outlaws redistricting plans that result in a reduced ability of voters of color to elect candidates of their choice.

In Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 U.S. 30 (1986), the U.S. Supreme Court set forth three conditions indicating that a districting plan or voting system has resulted in vote dilution. The three “Gingles preconditions” are whether: (1) an alternative districting plan can be drawn that includes one or more single-member districts in which the minority community is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in the district; (2) the minority group is politically cohesive in its support for its preferred candidates; and (3) in the absence of majority-minority districts, candidates preferred by the minority group would usually be defeated due to the political cohesion of non-minority voters in support of different candidates. Together, the second and third Gingles preconditions are commonly referred to as racial bloc or racially polarized voting.

If these three Gingles preconditions are met, a decisionmaker must then evaluate the “totality of circumstances” to determine whether minority voters “have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice.” Courts consider several factors (commonly known as the “Senate Factors”) pertaining to the jurisdiction’s history of voter discrimination to determine whether the minority vote has been diluted impermissibly. It will be “only the very unusual 11 Racially polarized voting occurs when different racial groups vote for different candidates. In a racially polarized election, for example, Black people vote together for their preferred (frequently Black) candidate, and most non-Black voters vote for the opposing (typically white) candidate.

13 Courts examine the “totality of the circumstances” based on the so-called “Senate Factors,” named for the Senate Report accompanying the 1982 Voting Rights Act amendments in which they were

Based on the results of the 2020 Census, a new congressional district map for Louisiana that includes only one majority-minority opportunity district likely violates Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act. Each of the three Gingles preconditions are likely present in Louisiana, and there is ample evidence that under the totality of circumstances, Black voters have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and elect candidates of their choice.

a. Gingles Precondition One: It Is Possible to Draw a Congressional District Map with Two Majority-Minority Opportunity Districts.

It is entirely possible to draw a second majority-minority opportunity district in the six-district congressional map. Appendix 1 provides seven different demonstrative district map plans, based on 2020 Census data, in which two districts are comprised of a majority of Black voters.

In each plan, the Black community, measured by the Black voting age population (BVAP) within each of the two majority-minority opportunity districts, is sufficiently large and geographically compact to satisfy the first Gingles precondition. First, each of the seven maps includes a second majority-minority opportunity district (in addition to District 2) where the BVAP is over 50%. Second, as compared to the current map, the illustrative maps include geographically compact communities of Black voters, as reflected by traditional redistricting principles. Indeed, each of the seven illustrative maps is equally or more compact than the current map on at least two of the three widely recognized statistical measures of compactness.

14 Clark v. Calhoun Cty., 21 F.3d 92, 97 (5th Cir. 1994).
15 See infra Appendix 2. The Supreme Court has held that a minority community is sufficiently large when it “make[s] up more than 50 percent of the voting-age population in the relevant geographical area.” Bartlett v. Strickland, 556 U.S. 1, 18 (2009).
16 League of United Latin Am. Citizens, 548 U.S. at 433 (“While no precise rule has emerged governing § 2 compactness, the inquiry should take into account traditional districting principles such as maintaining communities of interest and traditional boundaries.”).
17 See Compactness Reports for Illustrative Maps (on file with LDF).
As set forth in Appendix 1, there are numerous and varied district configurations with two majority-minority opportunity districts where the BVAP is the numerical majority, and the Black voting community is geographically compact. Accordingly, the first Gingles precondition would likely be satisfied if Louisiana’s new congressional map fails to provide a second majority-minority opportunity district. 18

There is ample evidence to suggest that the second and third Gingles preconditions are satisfied due to Louisiana’s well-documented history and ongoing record of racially polarized voting in elections across the state.

Over the past three decades, numerous federal courts have found that racially polarized voting pervades Louisiana statewide and local elections. 19 In the past two decades—including as recently as this year—the Department of Justice (DOJ) has sued local parishes under Section 2 three times; in each case, the DOJ identified racially polarized voting patterns within the parish. 20

The 2020 congressional elections similarly reflected racially polarized voting patterns. For instance, in the five districts comprised of a majority of white voters, there were four contests in which voters had a choice between Black and white congressional candidates. In 19 A district court recently found that there was sufficient preliminary evidence of racially polarized voting statewide to support plaintiffs’ challenge to Louisiana’s Supreme Court district map. Louisiana State Conference of NAACP v. Louisiana, 490 F. Supp. 3d 982, 1019 (M.D. La. 2020). In St. Bernard Citizens For Better Government, the district court found racially polarized voting patterns in statewide gubernatorial elections, as well as local parish elections. St. Bernard Citizens For Better Gov’t, 2002 WL 2022589, at *7 (E.D. La. Aug. 26, 2002). See, e.g., Terrebonne Par. Branch NAACP v. Jindal, 274 F. Supp. 3d 395, 436-37 (M.D. La. 2017), rev’d sub nom. Fusilier v. Landry, 963 F.3d 447 (5th Cir. 2020) (The district court found that there were racially polarized voting patterns in the parish’s judicial elections, and although the Fifth Circuit reversed the district court’s decision, it held that the district court did not err in its finding of racially polarized voting); Citizens for a Better Gretna v. City of Gretna, 636 F. Supp. 1113, 1124 (E.D. La. 1986); Major v. Treen, 574 F. Supp. 325, 337 (E.D. La. 1983) (The court held that there was racial polarization in Orleans Parish).

20 Most recently, in 2021, the DOJ sued the City of West Monroe under Section 2 over its at-large alderman elections. The DOJ contended that there was racially polarized voting sufficient to satisfy Gingles because “[i]n contests between Black candidates and White candidates for West Monroe Board of Alderman and other parish, state, and federal positions, White voters cast their ballots sufficiently as a bloc to defeat the minority’s preferred candidate.” The court agreed and entered a consent decree between the parties. United States v. City of West Monroe, No. 21-cv-0988 (W.D. La. Apr. 14, 2021); see also United States v. City of Morgan, No. 00-cv-1541 (W.D. La. Aug. 17, 2000) (“Racially polarized voting patterns prevail in elections for the City Council of Morgan City. In contests between [B]lack and white candidates for City Council, [B]lack voters consistently vote for [B]lack candidates and white voters vote sufficiently as a bloc to usually defeat the [B]lack voters’ candidates of choice.”); Greig v. City of St. Martinville, No. 00-cv-00603 (W.D. La. Jun. 3, 2000) (The DOJ asserted that “[e]lections in the City of St. Martinville are racially polarized”).
each of these four races, white candidates were elected over Black candidates. Therefore, there is ample evidence to support the conclusion that there are racially polarized voting patterns that may satisfy Gingles preconditions two and three.

In addition to the indicia of the three Gingles preconditions, under the “totality of circumstances,” Black voters have “less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice” in Louisiana’s congressional elections. Several of the Senate Factors, listed in footnote 13 above, strongly indicate that vote dilution is occurring, including: the extent of the history of voting discrimination in Louisiana (Factor 1); the extent of racially polarized voting in Louisiana (Factor 2); the extent to which Louisiana has used voting practices that may enhance the opportunity for discrimination against Black voters (Factor 3); the extent to which Black voters bear the effects of discrimination in a variety of areas of life (Factor 5); whether political campaigns in Louisiana have been characterized by overt or subtle racial appeals (Factor 6); and the extent to which Black candidates have been elected to public office in Louisiana (Factor 7). The following are a sample of the indicia under the totality of circumstances impacting Black voters’ ability to participate equally in Louisiana’s congressional elections:

- The state of Louisiana has an extensive history and ongoing record of voting discrimination that has adversely impacted the right of Black and other minority voters to register to vote, to vote, or otherwise to participate in the political process. Since Reconstruction, Louisiana has passed countless laws to deny Black democratic participation, including grandfather clauses, poll taxes, and educational and property qualifications.

- Louisiana has a long history and ongoing record of employing voting practices, such as at-large elections and redistricting, that have diluted the weight of Black Louisianans’ vote once they cast them. As mentioned above, the DOJ has sued parishes in Louisiana for violating Section 2’s non-vote dilution prohibition three times over the past thirty years. Most recently, the DOJ successfully challenged the City of West Monroe’s at-large alderman elections under Section 2.\textsuperscript{26} From the passage of the Voting Rights Act in 1965 until the Supreme Court’s \textit{Shelby County v. Holder} decision in 2013, the DOJ blocked nearly 150 proposed changes to voting policies or practices in Louisiana on the grounds that they discriminated against Black voters or diluted Black voting strength, pursuant to Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act.\textsuperscript{27}

- Louisiana’s statewide district maps have been challenged under the Voting Rights Act in numerous reapportionment cycles since 1965.\textsuperscript{28} Indeed, District 2, Louisiana’s only majority-minority district, was established in 1983 only after a federal district court held that the 1981 proposed congressional map diluted Black voting power in Orleans Parish by dispersing the parish’s Black majority into two different congressional districts.\textsuperscript{29}

- Louisiana political campaigns have been characterized by subtle and overt racial appeals impacting the political process. Current U.S. Representative for Louisiana’s first congressional district, Steve Scalise, spoke to a white supremacist group in 2002 while serving as a Louisiana state legislator.\textsuperscript{30} David Duke, the former grand wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, has run for public office in Louisiana several times; most recently, in 2016, he unsuccessfully ran for U.S. Senate to “defend the heritage of European American people.”\textsuperscript{31} Even with his explicit ties to white supremacy, Duke received over 58,000 votes.\textsuperscript{32} In 2018, a white Tangipahoa School Board Member and candidate for reelection posted a picture of a noose on Facebook with the caption “IF WE WANT TO MAKE AMERICA

\item See Major, 574 F. Supp at 327. Although this case predated \textit{Gingles}, the district court found that racially polarized voting, combined with “Louisiana’s history of racial discrimination, both \textit{de jure} and \textit{de facto}, continue to have an adverse effect on the ability of its [B]lack residents to participate fully in the electoral process.” \textit{Id.} at 339-40.

GREAT AGAIN WE WILL HAVE TO MAKE EVIL PEOPLE FEAR PUNISHMENT.”

- In 2001, the St. Bernard Parish School Board was sued under Section 2 for its redistricting plan that eliminated the only district where Black voters had an opportunity to elect a candidate of choice. Lynn Dean, a white state senator who was involved in the redistricting and the highest-ranking public official in the Parish, testified that he use[d] the [“n-word”] and “ha[d] done so recently.”

- Black Louisianans continue to experience the brunt of racial discrimination in every sector of public life. Black Louisianans experience higher unemployment rates than white Louisianans. Unemployment data from early 2021 shows that Black people were unemployed at a rate of 12%, compared to 5.3% for white people. Black Louisianans also experience socioeconomic disparities as a result of systemic discrimination. In 2019, 29.4% of Black people lived below the poverty line, compared to 12.5% of white people. Health disparities also persist among Black as compared to white Louisianans. Although only one-third of Louisiana’s population, Black people accounted for more than 70% of the people who died of COVID-19.

- Black people have been largely underrepresented in Louisiana public offices. Louisiana has never had a Black U.S. Senator and has not had a Black governor since Reconstruction. As described above, Louisianans rarely elect Black candidates to Congress; the state has had only four Black Congresspeople since 35 “Congress and the Courts have recognized the effect lower socio-economic status has on minority participation in the political process.” Id. In Citizens for a Better Gretna, the court found that “depressed levels of income, education and employment are a consequence of severe historical disadvantage” that in turn engenders “depressed levels of participation in voting and candidacy.” 636 F. Supp. at 1120.

39 The U.S. Supreme Court has held that one of the “predominant” factors under Section 2 is “the extent to which members of the minority group have been elected to public office in the jurisdiction.” Gingles, 478 U.S. at 37. See also Citizens for a Better Gretna, 636 F. Supp. at 1120 (“Where members of the minority group have not been elected to public office, it is of course evidence of vote dilution.”)
Reconstruction, all of whom were elected to represent majority Black districts.\textsuperscript{40} By contrast, since the Voting Rights Act was adopted in 1965, Louisiana has sent 45 white representatives to Congress.\textsuperscript{41} As noted above, none of the majority white districts in Louisiana has ever elected a Black representative. Louisiana’s first Black chief Justice of the state Supreme Court was appointed in 1994 following a consent decree that was entered in a case challenging the use of at-large judicial districts. As part of the consent decree, the court created a majority-minority judicial district that has continued to elect the only Black member of the State Supreme Court.\textsuperscript{42}

IV. The Louisiana State Legislature Can And Must Enact a Map with Two Majority-Minority Opportunity Districts.

For the reasons explained above, the state Legislature must earnestly consider its obligations under the Voting Rights Act and adopt a congressional map with two majority-minority opportunity districts to ensure Black voters’ right to an equal opportunity to elect candidates of their choice. The seven maps submitted with this letter—each of which includes two majority-minority districts—show that doing so is entirely feasible. We urge the state to fully consider and adopt a congressional map that ensures non-dilution of Black voting strength in Louisiana.\textsuperscript{43} Failure to do so may lead to costly litigation.\textsuperscript{44} We are happy to discuss the contents of this letter further and to provide additional assistance with developing a more inclusive congressional districting plan.

Sincerely,
